Gaurav adds, "She's kind-hearted and her advocacy is demonstrated through her visit here. Her visit to the shelter alone will give the charity much needed publicity. Eva was thrilled to see the happiness on the children's faces. She was also impressed by the yoga demonstration by the boys at the NGO. She took on the role of a teacher and taught English to the younger ones. She then sat with them while they ate their meal as well. The kids presented her with a handmade greeting card, a necklace and a bracelet as a parting gift. Apart from her desire to know about the history of the charitable centre, Eva also expressed her eagerness to know more about Indian history during the visit."

Eva runs her own charity, the Eva Longoria Foundation, and she's also a supporter of The Global Gift Foundation. "We met her through the various charities she's involved with and discussed our interest to support those in need," informs Gaurav.

According to sources, Eva will spend a few days in India and might visit other cities as well. "We cannot comment on her time in India as it's a personal trip," says Gaurav.
